FERC's Draft Environmental Impact Statement for PennEast

On July 22, 2016, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) released its Draft Environmental Impact Statement (DEIS) for the proposed PennEast Pipeline. After months of on-site data gathering by PennEast with and without permission of landowners and with input from U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the U.S. Department of Agriculture, FERC staff determined that construction and operation of the Project would result in some adverse environmental impacts, but impacts would be reduced to less-than-significant levels with the implementation of PennEast’s proposed and FERC staff’s recommended mitigation measures.

While this finding is not unexpected, the large gaps in field data leave much to be filled in later. Because of the size of the pipe and the required cover of that pipe, the trench will have to be at least seven feet deep. This means bedrock will have to be blasted in over 400 places along the route, more than forty in Northampton County alone. PennEast’s proposed construction work areas would be located within 50 feet of 462 structures, with 298 structures within 25 feet of PennEast’s proposed construction work area. A total of 66 of these structures within 25 feet of PennEast’s proposed construction work area are residential buildings.

Much more information is made public in this Draft Environmental Impact Statement. The entire DEIS can be found on the FERC website at: https://www.ferc.gov/industries/gas/enviro/eis/2016/07-22-16-eis.asp. Or search for “PennEast DEIS”

There are nearly 1200 pages of text, tables and maps included in the DEIS document so a thorough reading by one person will take great effort. FERC has limited the comment period to 45 days from the time the DEIS was released on July 22. This means that those of us who wish to analyze at least part of the DEIS and make a meaningful comment must work quickly to file with FERC by September 12, 2016. Comments may be filed with FERC at the ferc.gov website under Documents and Filings/e-comments. The Delaware Riverkeeper Network has issued a statement on the DEIS that can be found by searching “Delaware Riverkeeper PennEast DEIS.” More information on the PennEast Pipeline is available on the Delaware Riverkeeper website and Facebook page. See the “StopPennEast.org” website for information and links.

With your help we will continue to oppose the PennEast Pipeline project until it is stopped. Make comments online since the public comment meetings scheduled for August 15, 16, 17, 2016, have already passed. Remember, every bit of fossil carbon burned in modern times adds to the problem.

Peace Pole Walk & Dedication: Connecting Our Community & Our World

Celebrate LEPOCO’s 50 years of working for peace by joining us in the Bethlehem Rose Garden as we dedicate the new peace pole donated by LEPOCO and installed by the City of Bethlehem Parks Department. After the dedication ceremony those who are able will be walking for peace to the Peace Pole on the Moravian College campus, and then on to the Peace Pole at the Channel 39 offices near the Steel Stacks. This takes place at the start of an international week of walks/marches for peace: Campaign Nonviolence Week, September 18-25. September 21st is the United Nations International Day of Peace.

We’ll gather at the Peace Pole in the Rose Garden Park at the corner of 8th Ave. and Union Blvd., at 1 pm, on Sunday, September 18. The Bethlehem-based Balinese Gamelan, Mekar Sari, will set the tone by gathering us for the event. Once gathered, we will begin with a Lenni Lenapi Four Directions Opening. We’ve invited many voices from the Lehigh Valley to (continued on page 2)
Peacemakers Walk & Dedication
represent all the languages on the Peace Pole: Russian, Japanese, Chinese, Hebrew, Spanish, English, Arabic, and Lenni Lenape. The Peace Singers will provide additional music. There might even be a surprise historical puppet appearance.
Following the dedication ceremony we'll be led by lively music through the streets of Bethlehem, carrying our banners and signs to bring attention to the need to work towards ending violence in our communities, and ending war in our world. We'll walk to the Peace Pole at Moravian College (just under one mile), arriving at about 2:30 pm, where we'll take a short rest and participate in a brief program. From there we'll continue the walk to the Peace Pole located on the south side at Channel 39 (about 2.5 miles), arriving at about 4 pm, where we'll participate in another brief program. At this point walkers have the option of catching a LANTA bus to return to Broad & Guetter, and walking back to the Rose Garden (about another 2 miles total) or hitching a ride with our support vehicles. Peace activists who are unable to walk the whole route are welcome to drive or bike in order to join us as we arrive at each Peace Pole. We will also have a support vehicle to assist those who need to take a break any time along the route.

Browne & Gray on Brazil
Currently living in Brazil, Greta Browne and Guy Gray were back visiting the Lehigh Valley in June when they accepted an invitation from LEPICO's Americas Solidarity Group to do a presentation on Brazil. Some political turmoil was afoot there and we hoped they could bring some clarification. What was going on? Coup? Popular uprising? Legal process? They gave their presentation on "The Current Situation in Brazil," the evening of June 22, at the Peace Center, 18 people in attendance.
Greta & Guy have been living in Brazil for the past several years, homesteading, and therefore not necessarily in the know about what the national government was up to. It's not so strange that preparing for their presentation actually allowed them to wrap their own minds around what was going on there.
Their presentation was packed with information. Guy opened with a brief history of Brazil, starting from when they were a colony of Portugal. Their presentation touched on slavery, independence from Portugal, disparity between rich and poor, racism, white privilege, coups, governmental corruption, Dilma Rousseff, Lula, impeachment efforts, the Olympics, and more. This was clearly an introduction to a complicated story.
Guy and Greta did bring their political perspective to bear in their discussion. Before moving to Brazil, they had been politically active in Bethlehem, involved with LEPICO, the Green Party, and the Alliance for Sustainable Communities-Lehigh Valley. They started the Green Cafe on 4th Street and ran it for several years. Why did they go to Brazil? Greta was going home, having spent a significant part of her early life in Brazil. As retirees, Guy and Greta are continuing their green lifestyle on the family farm near Brasilia.

Acting to Honor Berta Cáceres
At the March for a Clean Energy Revolution on July 24 in Philadelphia a large puppet rose above the crowd. It was a beautiful likeness of Berta Cáceres, the Honduran environmental, indigenous, human rights leader murdered on March 3rd. The puppet helped marchers remember the importance of the work to save the planet.

We are invited to remember Berta Cáceres by convincing our members of Congress to co-sponsor the Berta Cáceres Human Rights in Honduras Act (HR-5474). Introduced by Hank Johnson in June, this legislation would suspend all U.S. military aid to Honduras until the country addresses its gross human rights violations. Can you be part of this effort by calling your member of Congress? In early July another environmental activist was murdered in Honduras – Lesbia Yaneth Urquía. Our calls are important.

Shortly after the tragic events of September 11, 2001, some family members of people killed on that day came together saying their grief was not a call for war. They formed the group September Eleventh Families for Peaceful Tomorrows. This film follows one of those families, Phyllis and Orlando Rodriguez, as they search for meaning and cope with grief after their son, Greg, was killed in the World Trade Center. They choose reconciliation and nonviolence over vengeance and begin a transformative journey that both confirms and challenges their convictions.

3 LEPOCO Newsletter / August - September 2016
Conference on Drone Warfare & Peacemaking

On July 24 and 25, folks from around southeastern Pennsylvania converged at Christopher Dock Mennonite High School to talk about drone warfare. The conference, “Faithful Witness in a Time of Endless War: Drone Warfare and God’s Call to Peacemaking,” sought to give space for church groups and people of faith to examine and speak out against the violence of drones.

The event brought together a stellar list of speakers on the issue. From Code Pink’s Medea Benjamin, to former CIA employee, Christopher Aaron, who worked on the predator drone program, the conference offered insight into and hope for addressing the United States’ policy of using drones in warfare.

Aaron, who chose to resign from his CIA position due to his objections with how drones were used, also brought a different perspective. Although not anti-war, his experience from having been deployed in Iraq and Afghanistan, as well as working within the CIA, has made him question the use of drones in battle and speak out against them.

Benjamin spoke on continuing to call on our legislators, hold them accountable, and urge them to take action. Robert Smith, coordinator for the Brandywine Peace Community gave an especially moving testimony for the need to continue to speak out against the U.S. drone program.

Other speakers for the weekend included Shane Claiborne, a Christian activist from Philly; the Rev. Kelly Denton-Borhaug, from Moravian College; Muhammed Malik, co-founder of Muslims for Ferguson and former executive director of CAIR; and many others.

LEPOCO was one of many co-sponsors for the event, which was truly an effort of many. Other sponsors included: 1040forpeace; American Friends Service Committee; Brandywine Peace Community; Center on Conscience & War (CCW); Franconia Mennonite Conference; Germantown Friends Meeting; Interfaith Network on Drone Warfare; Mennonite Central Committee East Coast; Mennonite Church USA Peace and Justice Network; National War Tax Resistance Coordinating Committee; Peace Action Education Fund (PAEF); PA Council of Churches; Pennsylvania Interfaith Network against Drone Warfare; Philadelphia Area Anti-Drone Network; Plains Mennonite Church; Salford Mennonite Church and the Justice & Peace Ministry of Salford; The Simple Way.

The conference ended with a public witness that Saturday at the Horsham, PA, Air Guard Station, in conjunction with Brandywine Peace Community’s monthly protest of the now fully operational Drone Command Center there. The protests make an appeal to the drone operators to walk away and help end the violence.

A New Group at Peace Camp

I have been a part of Peace Camp for many, many years. I was not a group leader or helper, but bringing the supplies from the office to First Presbyterian Church, hauling it in, up the elevator, down the hall into the Supplies Room and then doing the reverse after five days of Peace Camp. It was an annual rite. Last year, I was also asked to help with the training session, and this year I took on co-leadership of a new group — the Green Group.

The camp planning group had been wondering how they could help keep the older campers involved in Camp and create a bridge to helper status. The answer was to set up a group for those who had finished seventh or eighth grade that would offer the camp experience, but with a focus on learning and practicing leadership skills for helping with camp. I also saw that it could be a chance to work with them on peacemaking skills that they could use in their own lives — at school or in the community. To this end, I thought that I could extend the role playing scenarios that have been used in Peace Camp training for leaders and helpers to include situations that teens might encounter elsewhere.

Fortunately, I was able to enlist the help of Laura Riker, an experienced actor, middle school English teacher and improv coach, to get the campers willing to do some role playing of conflict resolution in tense situations. The teens responded very well and enjoyed the action.

I wanted to add a theme of social action to the group. Martha Christine led us in some letter writing to PA’s Congressional delegates, we fabric painted peace themed T-shirts, made posters, and then “peace marched” through several other groups on our way to demonstrate for peace at the corner of Tilghman St. and Cedar Crest Blvd. The campers were excited to count 23 positive reactions in 25 minutes of demonstrating.

Of course, the Green Group also participated in regular activities, including international dance, drumming, music, and all the important cooperative games. Ronnie Arena, Alex Schmidt, and Jasmin Maurer were the other leaders who contributed to the success of the new Green Group.

At the Peace Camp Evaluation, held a week after Peace Camp ended, we learned that each group, in its own way, felt similarly successful. Children of a newly welcomed Syrian family joined us, in three different groups. Amazingly, one of our regular teen helpers speaks fluent Arabic, so she was able to help the children participate more fully. Friendships were forged and seeds of peaceful living were planted in a multitude of creative ways. Without a sudden ceasing of all violent conflict, it is often difficult to measure the success of any peaceful effort. However, over the 27 years since the creation of LEPOCO’s Peace Camp, we have seen many of our young participants go on to peaceful careers and adult lives. And that’s not to men-

LEPOCO Statement on Violence, Policing and the Black Lives Matter Movement

LEPOCO grieves with the rest of the nation following recent shootings that have shattered so many families and communities. As an organization dedicated to building a just and peaceful world through nonviolent action, we feel compelled to speak out about the ongoing and escalating violence that has taken the lives of our fellow citizens, especially African-Americans, as well as members of law enforcement.

We recognize these tragic events to be rooted in a longstanding and well-documented history of racial disparity in the criminal justice system that disproportionately impacts people of color, as recently acknowledged by FBI Director, James B. Comey.* Institutional racism and structural problems such as poverty, a country awash in drugs and guns, plus a host of law enforcement practices, customs and institutions have fueled mass incarceration with the result that people of color, especially African-Americans, are overrepresented in arrests, incarceration, and killings by police. While problems of excessive force are repeatedly documented, accountability by police officers is most often lacking or invisible.

The Black Lives Matter movement has given voice to people’s justified anger at a criminal justice system that targets them disproportionately with profoundly adverse effects on individuals, families, communities, and our nation as a whole. We support their nonviolent effort to bring attention to this widespread and long-standing problem. We stand with them as they seek racial justice.

We call upon our local political leaders, police, and fellow citizens to recognize and address the fact that racial bias in policing breeds distrust. We support the policy proposals championed by Campaign Zero (www.joincampaignzero.org) to reduce police violence which include: ending broken windows policing; increasing community oversight and representation; limiting use of force; independently investigating and prosecuting police misconduct; mandating body cameras; improving police training; ending for-profit policing; demilitarizing police departments; and negotiating fair police union contracts.

As an organization committed to demilitarization on a national level, we especially hold that military weapons and tactics should not be making their way into the hands of our police officers or into our communities. When police enter communities as though they are an invading force and not members of that same community, we cannot build a more peaceful world. Just as we’ve seen in countries abroad, aggression and more weapons do not make our communities safer. These practices create a battle zone where anyone can be considered an enemy, and everyone is in the line of fire.

We recognize that policing is a dangerous business that puts individuals at risk on a daily basis as they accomplish their duty to protect and serve. We urge our local police chiefs to work in partnership with community stakeholders, to review practices and policies that are discriminatory in their effect, and to find ways to redress and prevent discrimination. Working together, we can ensure effective unbiased law enforcement so that our hearts will not be broken by another tragedy like Dallas, Baton Rouge, Minneapolis, Baltimore, and so many others.

We are not helpless in the face of this violence. We must come together to address the problems that contribute to it: ongoing systemic racism; racial bias in policing; economic inequality; militarism; and easy access to highly lethal weapons that threaten the public including the police. LEPOCO will continue to stand with others in the Lehigh Valley to address these problems and work for a more just and peaceful world.

*FBI Director acknowledges “hard truths” about racial bias in policing, Sari Horwitz, Washington Post, 2/12/15.
Showing Up... for Local Activism

The following are brief reports about some of the local activism for peace and justice since the last newsletter.

+++ The Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia, July 25-28, was quite a production all by itself, but the street marches, vigils, speak-outs and many indoor conferences and programs also filled the city with progressive slogans and discussion to surround those attending the convention.

The Sunday, July 24, March for a Clean Energy Revolution, was the largest single event with thousands marching down Market Street on a very hot day. Several dozen eastern Pennsylvania activists boarded a bus to the March that picked up passengers in Stroudsburg and at the Rt. 33/William Penn Hwy. Park & Ride. Some of us on that bus carried LEPOCO banners in the March, including one made by Amanda Zaniesienko for the occasion: "Clean Energy! No Wars! Another World Is Possible."

Another activity that week that is of special interest to peace activists was the Anti-War Truth Display outside the Arch Street United Methodist Church, near Philadelphia City Hall. The Display lasted four days and featured military drone replicas, banners, masks representing the child victims of drone attacks, and the all-important leafleting. The Brandywine Peace Community was the primary local organizer.

Bernie Sanders’ Peace Warriors were all over the city, some of them distributing a flyer filled with peace wisdom quotes from people like Gandhi and Arundhati Roy. The final quote on the page was from Rebecca Adamson, an American Cherokee activist, “It takes four generations to recover from every act of violence.”

+++ The Stop the Wars Committee of LEPOCO organized three activities calling for “Remembering Hiroshima and Nagasaki by spending “No More Tax Dollars for Nuclear Weapons.” On August 5, a small group gathered at LEPOCO to watch, “I was Her Age,” a short film about Hibakushas, now elderly, who were children at the time of the atomic bombings. Eight of the Hibakushas joined the Peace Boat in 2015 for a three-month journey around the world, stopping at cities to meet with Mayors for Peace, other community leaders, children, and adults. It is a simple, but touching story as they talk about their experiences in August 1945 and call for an end to nuclear weapons. You can watch the film online by searching for the title.

On Hiroshima Day, August 6, and Nagasaki Day, August 9, we took the message to Musikfest (north and south respectively) holding our banner (Remember Hiroshima-Nagasaki: No More Tax $s for Nukes) and distributing a small leaflet that, among other points, called for an end to the plan to spend $1 trillion to overhaul and rebuild the nuclear weapons arsenal and infrastructure of the U.S.

Thank you to Terry and Sylvia Briscoe, Bob Riggs, Peter Crownfield, Mimi Lang, Susie Ravitz, Monica McAghon, Tom Stinnett and Nancy Tate, who held the banner and distributed the leaflets.

+++ August 15-17, anti-PennEast Pipeliners activists struggled mightily to bring some public exposure to FERC’s so-called public hearings with press conferences featuring citizens impacted by the pipeline and the video-taping of citizen comments. The “hearings” were for the Draft Environmental Impact Statement on the 118-mile pipeline. FERC only conducted private interviews – to which the public (media or individuals) will only have access online, leaving concerned citizens less informed, less inspired, more isolated. Apparently FERC desperately wants to end the flood of citizen opposition to this and other pipelines. Please see the article by Jim Orben on page 1 about how you can join the flood of opposition.

Action how adult participants grow each year in their understanding of peace!

Change is in the wind and Peace Camp is part of it. Consider being involved in Peace Camp 2017: you can help with planning, take part in Peace Camp during the third week in July or, most importantly, spread the word so more young people can enjoy the benefits of a carefree week focused on living peacefully in our world.

On July 12, Democracy Now! reported that Russell “Maroon” Shoatz, a former Black Panther held for more than two decades in solitary confinement has won a permanent reprieve from solitary and nearly $100,000 in a settlement with the Pennsylvania Department of Corrections. Shoatz was convicted in 1970 of first-degree murder for an attack on a Philadelphia police station that left one officer killed and another wounded. In the 1980s he became active with the Pennsylvania Association of Lifers and worked to abolish sentences of life without parole. His supporters say his more than two decades in solitary confinement was retaliation for his activism. Matt Meyer of the War Resisters League spoke about Russell “Maroon” Shoatz at a LEPOCO Potluck & Politics in 2014.
